

Ashley Robinett is Alabama Power's vice president of Public Relations where she oversees the company's corporate communications and brand management, providing strategic communications counsel that ensures messages reach employees, customers and key stakeholders.

Robinett most recently served as vice president of Corporate Real Estate where she was responsible for managing the company's land holdings in support of business objectives through land management, acquisition and sales.

Prior to leading the company's corporate real estate efforts, Robinett was the area manager for Alabama Power's Birmingham Division where she was responsible for business office operations, customer relations, community development and external affairs.

She joined Southern Company, the parent of Alabama Power, in 2001 as an engineer for the Southern Power wholesale subsidiary. She worked several years in Southern Company's fuel services organization, managing emission allowance procurement and other strategic environmental issues for the generating fleet. In 2008, she returned to Southern Power to manage its resource planning, risk analysis and business case development functions, including renewable energy. She has served as the assistant to the executive vice president and chief operating officer of Southern Company and to the president and chief executive officer of Alabama Power.
